La fuente de energia es un resorte que se tensa manualmente, o de forma automatica gracias a un rotor. En Los Relojes Camel Trophy, como en todos los relojes mecanicos de cuerda manual, o en un reloj automatico, La cuerda tiende a desenrollarse, liberando la energia necesaria para activar las distintas partes del mecanismo y hacer que el movimiento suene como un tictac. El pendulo y la espiral son realmente los componentes del mecanismo que dan ritmo a su reloj Camel Trophy. Reloj Crono Automatico online Los Relojes Camel Trophy contienen entre 100 y mas de 250 pequenos componentes mecanicos ensamblados cuidadosamente por relojeros expertos, El Calibre suele ser de menor tamano que una moneda de 1 Euro y es colocado dentro de la caja del reloj Camel Trophy, de forma artesana por un relojero experto en los Camel Trophy. Reloj Crono Automatico online Para mantener la hora exacta 2203,11, en los relojes Camel Trophy automaticos, se actua de la misma forma que lo haria en los relojes mecanicos manuales actuando sobre la corona, si su reloj Camel Trophy no es automatico, es necesario que se le de cuerda a mano, girando la corona de cuerda de la caja una vez al dia. Esta accion libera la energia necesaria para el correcto funcionamiento entre unas 36 y 72 horas.

Para dar cuerda a un Reloj Camel Trophy mecanico de cuerda manual, sujete sencillamente el reloj con la mano y gire la corona de la caja en el sentido de las agujas hasta que note que se bloquea. Esto le indica que se ha completado el proceso de dar cuerda. Tenga en cuenta que si le da cuerda al reloj mientras lo lleva puesto puede enrollar en exceso el resorte, lo que podria llegar a romperlo. Apart from the first and very last of these competitions, Land Rover supplied the teams with their vehicles, and over the twenty years of Land Rovers involvement in the Camel Trophy, all the Land Rover vehicle range were used at one time or another, the teams for each years event all being supplied with the same heavily modified by Land Rover Special Vehicles model.Some competitors bought their vehicles, and many remained in the host countries. Those that returned to the UK were stripped of their equipment by Land Rover prior to being released for sale, leaving new owners the expensive task of restoring them to Camel Trophy specifications.The end of the Camel Trophy did not mark the end of Land Rovers involvement in international vehicle adventure competition, however, with the "G4 Challenge" being the immediate successor to the Camel Trophy, starting in 2003.The typical "sandglow" colour used for the Land Rover vehicles in the Camel Trophy competition was a characteristic feature that was carried over into the dial colour of some Camel trophy watches. Firstly, the Camel cigarette brand under its owners, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company in the US and Japan Tobacco outside the US, sponsored the Camel trophy as part of their sponsorship of various motor sport events and competitions. However, the Camel Trophy Adventure watches, like much other Camel brand merchandise, was not directly linked to Camel cigarettes but was the product of an indirectly related separate company, "Worldwide Brands Incorporated." I have decided to quote from the beginning of this document at some length, partly because it bears relationship to other watch brands that have also been created as a result of brand diversification. It is a subsidiary of R J R Nabisco and is legally and financially separate from any tobacco company. WBI is the owner of various international brand names, which it licences throughout the world.

It has acquired registered trade mark rights in these brand names throughout the world. It has no interest in and does not trade in tobacco products. Brand diversification involves the commercial exploitation of the unique goodwill and asset value of an established brand name for business diversification purposes. It takes a wellknown brand name, uses the goodwill as a basis for creating trade in fields totally unrelated to that in which the brand name was originally used, and, if successful, eventually is recognised and is familiar to consumers in a totally different product category. By way of example, one brand of primary importance to WBI is the CAMEL brand. This started out as a brand used in relation to tobacco products and, since becoming the subject of brand diversification 17 years ago, the mark CAMEL has formed the basis of a substantial and growing international trade in products completely unrelated to tobacco. WBI is the owner of the CAMEL trade mark in all product categories other than tobacco. There is no direct link between WBI and the tobacco producer. "Apparently, 128 people were directly employed and about 920 indirectly employed, and of those, only 3 were directly employed and 10 indirectly employed dealing with the Camel Trophy watches. Usefully, our own esteemed Forum leader, Roy, confirmed on the thread that the Camel Trophy watches were designed, made and distributed by Mondaine Watch Limited. Exactly when Camel Trophy watches were introduced is unclear, though it must be after WBI started diversification of the Camel brand name, and it is also unclear when it was that they were dropped from production. Some, but not all, Camel Trophy Adventure watches have a stamped serial number on the caseback and future researchers might be able to find out more about these numbers. The watch itself has a unidirectional rotating bezel and screwdown crown with stated water resistance of 100 metres. Pic from hspot.net. I tried a new battery but nothing.

I remember my mate wearing his dad's at school whilst smoking camel tabs. That watch still runs today and is worn by my wife! Really my interest is only contained by finances and I plan to continue my collection as quickly as possible. It is a shame but the go to website for these watches, CTwatches.co.uk has gone down. It was a fantastic resource for information, however, I believe the owner decided to give up as it was time consuming for no reward. A guy called Johannes has a new one that is pretty decent. I tried a new battery but nothing. You can take it to a watchmaker and they'll simply swap the old movement with a new one. They're not pricey either. You can take it to a watchmaker and they'll simply swap the old movement with a new one. They're not pricey either. I finally attained a Camel Trophy Masterpiece 27 jewel movement, sapphire glass, double gold bezel. One of only 2500 ever made, and of the four variations in model this one is 1 of the 2 rarer ones with the gold plated bezel. Number 960 in the series. She's a beauty! Paste as plain text instead. Absolutely delighted to find this up for grabs. I even got a warranty card stamped by the dealer and a genuine instruction manual. I'm not sure if it would count for much as they haven't been made for years. It turned out to be even better when I found out a second hand version of the exact same model had been sold on eBay for more than I paid. The Camel brand of tobacco products were owned by R J Reynolds and the events were a form of sponsorship, no doubt designed to reflect the tough guy and girl image. I once saw an advertisement in a magazine at the time asking for people to come forward to join a team, but by all accounts they were very tough going.
