H. pylori is a common species of gastric bacteria, part of the “normal flora” of billions of people around the world. Helicobacter pylori (H. pylori) is a bacterium commonly found in the stomach of about half of the world’s population. For most people, H. pylori infection does not cause problems or symptoms, but for some people, H. pylori infection can cause digestive problems, including ulcers and, much less commonly, stomach cancer.What are the symptoms of H. pylori?Most people with H. pylori infection have no symptoms. In people who have ulcers caused by H. pylori, the first symptoms of ulcers include: The next symptoms of a gastric ulcer include: H. pylori infection is diagnosed with a history of the patient and a physical exam, and tests that may include:Blood testsBreathing tests (Breathing tests) urea breathing) Stool testsTissue biopsy from the lining of the stomachEndoscopy of the stomach Tissue Treatment for H. pylori infection usually involves taking several medications for 14 days. proton pump inhibitors (PPIs) to reduce the production of gastric acid Two antibiotics are usually recommended together with a PPI to reduce the risk of treatment failure and antibiotic resistance Quadruple therapy with bismuth subsalicylate, metronidazole, tetracycline and a PPI administered for 14 days Triple therapy with clarithromycin, amoxicillin and a PPI, all given twice daily for 14 days Concomitant therapy: a clarithromycin, amoxicillin, a nitroimidazole (tinidazole or metronidazole), and a PPI administered together for 10-14 days Hybrid therapy: amoxicillin and a PPI for 7 days followed by amoxicillin, clarithromycin, a nitroimidazole and a PPI for 7 days Levofloxacin triple therapy: levofloxacin, amoxicillin and a PPI for 10-14 days Quadruple therapy Levofloxacin: levofloxacin, omeprazole, nitazoxanide and doxy Sequential therapy with levofloxacin: amoxicill and a PPI for 5-7 days followed by levofloxacin, amoxicillin, a nitroimidazole and a PPI for 5-7 days, followed by levofloxacin, amoxicillin, a nitroimidazole and a PPI for 5-7 daysMany patients with H. pylo have an antibiotic-resistant infection, so It is important to take the full course of all prescribed medications and have a blood or stool test to confirm that the infection has cleared. Complications of H. pylori infection include: v Digestive Disorders: Common Misconceptions View Slideshow My husband and I have just discovered that our son of 33 has been diagnosed a lung cancer adenocarcsonoma that has spread to the stomach. We're not taking him. Catch. We're devastated and scared. we meet with the oncologist tomorrow to see where it is and also set up other appointments. Can't we stop crying and ask why? is a single parent with a 14-year-old son. this is all new for us and we are just praying everything to be ok and getting the best cure possible. for now, we are afraid of so many questions. shows your donation deductible from taxes finances lung diseases and research on lung cancer, new treatments, health education of lungs and more, make a donation to more than 700,000 people who receive the latest news about lung health, including COVID-19, research, air quality, inspirational stories and resources. Thank you! You will now receive updates by email from the American lung association. was on January 18, 2013 when my trip started. It was the day my husband and I told us I had lung cancer. I thought it was impossible. I was a woman in my early '50s, healthy as a horse, and a non-smoker. Okay - except for occasional smoke when I went bar jumping during college a million years ago - I'm a non-smoker! Only people who smoke have lung cancer I thought! Wow, that's a joke. I learned that lung cancer is the main cause of death on all other types of cancer. Why don't they tell us that? from that moment on, my family and I met oncologists and other specialists, I took a myriad of tests and looked on the internet to know my new life or short-term life I was learning. My family, what can I say about them. they took over every time we saw the doctor or we had to take a test - everything. I heard everyone, but I didn't hear a word they said. I was dying. My only thought was when and how long. I started the therapy that was the best thing I could have done not only for me, but for my family. We were all suffering. I was leaving the love of my life and were losing my wife, mother and grandmother. what kept everything together. the next 2 months were a blur. My family searched where to go and who to see, specialists here and specialists there. We knew my cancer was rare and very few surgeons would accept my case. Actually, there are two. what we chose was on the opposite side of the country or so we thought! It was in our neck of the woods. When we met with him with my family and talked, I just had a blank look until he looked me in the eyes, he took my hand and said "you and I will save your life." I heard! the next day we met my oncologist who had more amazing news. My genetic marking results have finally been in and are one of the peoplethat tested positive FISH for the ELK4-ALK fusion gene. I have no idea what that means, only that 1 out of 5 people can take Xalkori, a relatively new drug designed for my genetic signs. It has been decided that a few months after the surgery you would now start the journey of chemo pills - 2 per day, perhaps forever. My luck was really changing. TimeThe biggest challenge of my life: life-saving surgery. The third March, my life changed again. I had surgery to remove the right lung, the right pleura and the right diaphragm. Thus, the whole right side did not have immediate organs inside the rib, so a gortex diaphragm was added to keep the ribs and the cattle around the heart. It was a very, very long surgery with many months of healing. Let us jump forward between 2013 and 2015: Suffice it to say that the recovery was long, difficult and was not without side effects, all that I live with today. After the 29th round of chemo, we decided to stop chemo at the end of 2015. I've always been called the boy of miracles at the center of cancer. Some days I feel that way, others I don't. The many stays in the hospital, appointments with doctors, side effects, fatigue, well, are tough not only for me but for my family. My family... I'm the backbone of my support. They were great. They never gave up on me, even when I gave up. They supported me, applauded me, yelled at me, pushed me, and did everything they could to get me back on my feet. I thank God every day for my husband, my daughter, my son, my son-in-law and my future daughter-in-law. They stayed with me in the hospital, bathed me, brushed my teeth, and took care of things you wouldn't expect your family to do. You are my spine and my life and I love you more than you can possibly imagine. Today I'm not the person I used to be, and I'll never be that person. I'm the new me. While I am now free from three years of cancer, I still look behind me waiting for the bomb to fall, which is quite common for cancer survivors. I returned to part-time work and became a member of the board of directors of LUNG FORCE. I want to help people who have lung problems and let them know that just because you're programmed to die doesn't mean you're going to. I'm still struggling, and sometimes I bumped into the wall. I still have all the many side effects and I live with them every day. It's my new life, my new world, my new me. We have a new grandson who brings me as much joy as his big brother. I can spend so much time with them and be the meme I feared I could never be. A life that alters diseases like cancer changes you forever. Learn not to sweat the little things and appreciate every day of your life. I try to become a voice and a source of support for others who are fighting and have fought cancer. I personally thank God every day for giving me another day. I am reaching my next goal in 2018, where I will have reached five years of survival for cancer. Then I can move on to my new objectives -10 years, 15 years, 20 years and so on. No matter where He will bring life, I am a CANCER SORVIVOR. Exhibition
