"Unlike the popular belief, noir does not require a city road for its environment . nor water, for that matter, noir thrives on secrets, lies and lust, everything flowing abundantly through the jewel in the fragile crown of the coachella valley ... for all the playfulness of the genre and the position, of the wisecracks and of the pools in the form of kidneys, there is an insignificant darkness waiting to filter, as much blood in the water of the pool. "- los angeles times" evoking pictures of palm springs and probably thinking about pastel-colored pool floatis, midcentury chic architecture, a gigantic marilyn monroe looking over the city as his guardian angel. but you do not need to scratch deeply to find the darkness in the desert - and even palm springs, with its infinite well of the pools, violently colored cocktails and incredibly green meadows, it is no exception. "- review of book los angeles" an eye-catching anthology of 14 stories about life and crime in the playground of the mojave desert to the stars. "- mysteryscene magazine" palm springs noir presents a collection of stories set in a cross section of desert cities and written mainly by authors with the ties of the coachella valley. "- palm springs life" this compilation is a tour of roller coasters that is full of suspense, mystery and steamed sexuality. brilliantly conceived, Demanco-Barrett and the other authors who help to carry the reader effortlessly to the sharp, lunatic side and slipped into one of the most famous and iconic places in southern California, a safe thing of the bestseller and a must-handp list reading, palm springs noir brings indisputable the heat. "- new york journal of booksakashish books continues its award-winning series of original noir anthologies, launched in 2004 with brooklyn noir: each book includes all new stories, each located in a distinct position within the geographical area of the book. palm springs noir has new stories of: t. jefferson parker, janet fitch, eric beotner, kelly shire, tod goldberg, michael craft, barbara Demarco-Barrett, rob roberge, jd born, eduardo santiago, rob bowman, chris j. bahnsen, ken layne and alex espinoza. by introduction: the best noir writers make us feel the warmth of the sun, the touch of a lover . the setting can be gritty but can also be sublime, it is no longer relegated to urban premises and hotel rooms seminars, but also dwellingswimming pools. So, Palm Springs, which may seem like a strange setting for a collection of dark stories - Itâ€ is so sunny and bright here. T The quality of light is different from any other part, and with an average of three hundred days of sun per year, what could gothe stories of this collection follow as the storms of evil dust common to the area. More than half of them are writers who live here full time; they all have houses in southern California. They know this place in ways that visitors and foreigners will never know. These are not stories that light in the glossy books of the tables that tell the beautiful life of Palm Springs. There's really a lush life here, but for the characters of these stories, it's often out of reach. Book links will take you to Amazon. As Amazon Associate earn money from qualified purchases.
