Calling and texting people is probably a big part of what you do on your Android phone. Why not make it as easy as possible to reach your favorites? We'll show you how to add shortcuts to contacts. Add Contacts to Home Screen with Google Contacts Google has its own Contacts app that comes pre-installed on Pixel phones, but it's also available in the Play Store for all Android devices. This is the first method we'll use to add contacts to the home screen. Open the Google Contacts app and select a contact from the list. Tap the three-dot menu icon in the top right corner. Select "Add to Home Screen." Now you can either touch and hold the icon to manually place it on the home screen or select "Add to Home Screen" to put it there automatically. The shortcut will now be on your home screen, and you can tap it to quickly go to the person's contact page and start a call or text! Add Contacts to Home Screen with Samsung Contacts Samsung's built-in Contacts app for Galaxy devices also supports home screen shortcuts, though it's not quite as simple as the Google Contacts app. We have to use a widget. First, touch and hold any blank space on the home screen and select "Widgets." Scroll through the list of widgets until you find "Contacts." This will bring up a menu where you can actually choose from three different contact shortcuts. Contact: Open the person's contact information page. Direct Dial: Immediately starts a phone call. Direct Message: Opens directly to an SMS conversation with the person. Scroll from left to right to choose a widget, then tap "Add." Next, select the contact for the shortcut. The shortcut will be added to your home screen, and you can simply tap it to do the selected action! Little things like this can make life a lot easier. You might have a few people you contact a lot, and you could put all these shortcuts on one page for easy access. RELATED: How to Add Google Maps Shortcuts to Your Android Home Screen If you're just getting started with Android, its customizability can seem a bit daunting. We'll walk you through customizing your Android home-screen, taking advantage of widgets, and getting third-party launchers with more features. The screenshots for this article were taken on Android 4.2. If you're using an older device, the exact process will look a little different, but you should be able to follow along anyway. Wallpapers & Live Backgrounds To set a wallpaper for your home screen, long-press the screen. On the default Android interface, you'll see a wallpaper-chooser dialog. If you're using a different interface, such as the customized one provided by your device's manufacturer, you may see a menu with other choices, including shortcuts and widgets. Tap the Wallpaper option in the menu. Android provides you with three options for wallpaper: Gallery: Choose an image from the Gallery app on your Android. This includes images stored locally on your phone or tablet and images stored in your Picasa Web Albums account online. Live Wallpapers: Live wallpapers are animated backgrounds for your home screen. Android includes a few understated live backgrounds, but you can download more from Google Play. Some live wallpapers are detailed, high-resolution 3D environments. Wallpapers: This option displays the preinstalled wallpapers available on your device. The wallpaper you choose will be used on all your home screens. If you want separate wallpapers on different screens, you can use a third-party launcher home screen with a new one. For example, Nova Launcher attempts to emulate the default experience fairly closely, adding additional features on top. It's also a good way to get a more stock Android-like launcher on a device with a custom, manufacturer-created launcher. Other launchers like GO Launcher EX go in other directions. Halo Launcher (older folder first.) You can then tap the folder to access its included apps and give it a name. To remove a shortcut, widget, or other element from your home screen, long-press the element to grab it, then drag and drop it on the X at the top of your screen (in portrait orientation) or the left side of your screen (in landscape orientation). Widgets You can also add widgets to your home screen. Widgets can be almost anything. For example, there are widgets that display your email, calendar events, and tasks directly on your home screen, allowing you to interact with them. There's a widget that displays a large clock so you can see the time, and there's an included widget that gives you quick access to commonly used settings, such as Wi-Fi and Bluetooth toggles. There are also widgets that allow you to pin a single bookmark or contact to your home screen, giving you quick access to that bookmark or contact without opening the associated app. Android includes a lot of widgets, and if you've installed some apps, you probably already have some third-party widgets installed. You can get more from Google Play. To add a widget, open your Apps drawer and tap the Widgets tab. Long-press a widget and drop it anywhere on one of your home screens. (On older versions of Android or alternate launchers, you may not see a widgets tab. To add a widget, long-press the home screen and select Widgets. You'll see a list of available widgets.) On Android 4.1 and newer, widgets can be resized - long-press a widget on your home screen and drag the handles to resize it. Widgets and shortcuts will also automatically move away as you move elements around the screen, making it easier to set up your home screen. Android 4.2 also supports lock-screen widgets, which you can add from the lock screen. Alternate Launchers If you want more from your Android phone or tablet's home screen - more options, more features, more themes, or more home screens instead of the default five - you can install a third-party launcher from Google Play. A third-party launcher replaces Android's default home screen with a new one. For example, Nova Launcher attempts to emulate the default experience fairly closely, adding additional features on top. It's also a good way to get a more stock Android-like launcher on a device with a custom, manufacturer-created launcher. Other launchers like GO Launcher EX go in other directions. Halo Launcher brings a modern Android 4.0-like launcher to devices running dated versions of Android - it's a good example of what Android's customizability allows. Android's default launcher has become easier and more user-friendly to customize in recent versions - this process might be a bit clunkier if you have a device running an older version of Android. Widgets have also been put front-and-center in the app drawer, allowing more people to take advantage of them. One of Android's most popular features is its use of widgets to customize and access the functionality of an app on the device's home screen. Even though widgets can contribute to draining your battery, because they are so useful, it's often worth the trade-off. Below we will discuss ten of the best Android home screen widgets. Battery Widget Reborn Since we just mentioned above that using widgets can drain your battery faster than if you didn't use them, the Battery Widget Reborn is one to consider. As the name implies, this Android home screen widget enables users to monitor how much charge is remaining on your phone battery. It is a simple design with a small 1x1 circle that has a number inside. The number can be estimated time left or a percentage. In addition to monitoring, users can also use quick toggles to turn off settings such as Bluetooth and Wi-Fi and switch to dark mode. If you are looking for additional battery stats, you can click through to see them too. Flashlight Widget You never know when you might need to use a flashlight. Since your cell phone is always either in your hand or within reach, having this app on your phone is a must-have. Unfortunately, Android flashlight widgets have a bad reputation of being packed with permissions and junk ads that have been known to snoop through your data or worse. Flashlight Widget is safe, open-source, free to use, has no ads, and doesn't require any permissions. The only thing a user needs to do is turn the flashlight on or off. 1Weather: Widget Forecast Radar Track forecasts and current weather conditions for your location as well as up to 12 others with 1Weather: Widget Forecast Radar. See graphical representations of the current conditions such as humidity, precipitation forecast, severe weather alerts (the U.S. only), and maps. Easily share weather conditions via social media and email with your friends. If you are planning a trip based on the weather, this is a very helpful widget. Slider Widget - Volumes Rather than searching through your settings to change the sound volume on your phone or adjust the screen brightness, Slider Widget - Volumes enables you to make these adjustments directly from your home screen. Use either your hardware button or the widget slider to change the brightness and volume. Choose between using individual sliders for each adjustment or just one for all. You can control the size of the widget so that it blends into your home screen. Email Blue Mail Manage an unlimited number of email accounts from various providers in one place with Email Blue Mail. Send group emails, enable smart push notifications, and personalization across multiple email accounts. The home screen widget has an easy to use and intuitive design, coupled with a powerful unified interface. It also features a unified calendar to create, edit and view all your events and meetings easily. Best Stocks Widget: Investing.com Stock Exchange If you have investments in the stock market, Investing.com: Stocks, Finance, Markets & News is a widget you will want to install on your Android device. Track all your stock prices and search for stocks on over 70 global exchanges. After you search for a stock, it is automatically added to your widget. Modify or resize it to fit your home screen and view price updates in real-time. For those into cryptocurrency, Investing.com has a Bitcoin widget too. Muzel Live Wallpaper Do you like to change your phones' home screen wallpaper often with beautiful images? Then Muzel Live Wallpaper is the widget for you. Choose between the live wallpaper provided by Muzel of famous works of art or your favorite photos of family, friends, holidays and scenes from your own gallery. Your home screen will be refreshed based on the images you select and the schedule you set up to use on your phone. When using other widgets or icons, the artwork will dim, blur, or recede into the background and remain unobtrusive. Muzel is developer-friendly. You can access the code or use an API to build your own wallpaper source and create even more customizations for the App. Google Using the Google widget lets you keep up-to-date about the things that are important to you. You can find answers to your questions quickly, search for places of interest, and browse Google with just a tap. There is no need to open your browser to find anything you want on the web. My Data Manager - Data Usage If you have ever had to pay for mobile data overages, you know how much they add up. Keeping track of your data with My Data Manager - Data Usage is a great widget to help you avoid those excess charges. Set custom alarms and alerts in real-time, track which apps are using the most data, and check data usage across multiple devices for family shared plans. Simple Sticky Note Widget Notes are invaluable. They allow you to keep track of a multitude of events, information and things to do and free up a busy mind, keeping it undistracted. Jot down notes for random things you need to do or your shopping list directly on the home screen of your Android. Adjust the shape and size of your note and access it easily. Instead of using physical sticky notes or clunky note apps that come with your phone, use Simple Sticky Note to make sure you get things done on your to-do-list. Use widgets to customize your Android's home screen and enhance your Android experience. All the above widgets are free to use from the Google Play Store. Some offer paid upgrades for increased functionality. Widgets can become cumbersome and so it's a good idea to save battery and real estate on your Smartphone by only having those widgets that are going to enhance your experience and prove truly useful.
