DirecTV has expanded to expand its live streaming options for users of your mobile app on Wednesday, also providing access to the registered recorded DVR The satellite provider announced the functionality as part of a regular upgrade to its iOS app, at the same time that parent company AT&T announced that DirecTV upstream video no longer counts against the assignment of a customer's data. Appears almost every channel is available to be streamed by app testing, including local programming and premium networks such as HBO or Showtime, if you're a subscriber to them. There are some obvious exceptions, such as company music channels, pay-per-view channels and channels with adult or 4K content. The option is currently not available for Android, as the app on Google Play was most recently updated two weeks ago. While DVR functionality like live TV pausing doesn't seem to be available, any pre-recorded content on your home DVR is streaming, including an offline viewing feature that allows you to download content to your device. This offline viewing option is particularly welcome, considering that often-touchy relationship content providers have had with other services trying to do the same thing. Of course, there are restrictions here: to download, you'll need to be on the same Wi-Fi network as the DVR, and the service itself requires a Genie HR44+ set-top box to work. It's not immediately clear how the new DirecTV streaming options jive with the DirecTV Now service announced by AT&T earlier this year. That service does essentially the same thing as what the enhanced streaming options do (although without the requirement to subscribe to the satellite service.) Whether this is the start of the launch of that service is not yet known, although AT&T CEO Glenn Lurie can give more details in a presentation at CTIA the following Wednesday. StarzWhile has not yet launched, the next DirecTV from AT&T Now live TV streaming service has rope cutters and those considering cable ditching excited with its promise of over 100 channels for $35 a month. Earlier this week, a partial list of channels was leaked, but now we can safely bet on other channels, as Starz announced it is bringing its premium channels to the service. âStarz is very excited to join DirecTV Now and offer consumers another exciting new way to sign up for our channels and services. Starz has had a huge leap in the market as the fastest premium pay-TV service flagship since beginning its original programming strategy and second most widely subscribed to in the United States, Starz Chief Operating Officer Jeffrey Hirsch said in a statement. "With the new Starz Original series, including Power, Outlander, Ash vs. Evil Dead, Survivorâs Remorse, and next yearâs American Gods, and exclusive first-rate hit movies including Star Wars: The Force Awakens and Avengers: Age of Ultron, Starz will be featured on this upcoming platform of with great value for consumers.â Direction TV will offer a total of eight channels between the Starz and Starz Encore brands. This includes includes Starz Network, Starz Encore and Starz Encore Westerns. This will also include the company's video-on-demand offers, including the current and past seasons of its original series. These channels will probably not be included in the core package, but they will be offered in a separate package, similar to how the Starz channels are offered on Sling TV. â € œWith the addition of premium networks from Starz and Starz Encore, we are continuing to build a robust streaming platformâ € , said the content agent of the AT & T, Dan York. â € œDirectvâ € will now give consumers the best of both worlds â € ¤ a width of great content with freedom to look at it anywhere, at any time.â € ¤ There is still no word on when DirecTV NOW He will make his official debut, but as with previous relationships, Starz's declaration mention that the service will be launched later this month.
